I have no idea how long it is going to be, but I am planning on taking my laptop so I can blog and possibly even upload some pictures and some artwork. :) So if you don't hear from me for a few days or hear of me having a computer malfunction, I will be heading to either Vegas or Salt Lake City. :) Hope to see you all again before I go though. Anyway, this is just a quick update to let you know that I have decided to once again change my blog so that my life doesn't become too boring to you. :) Please feel free to leave comments as always, and I will see you soon. :)The TGN is like a 'lost' organelle: it's difficult to identify and 'see', and the molecule(s) involved in this process are still unknown. The GPI-anchored protein CD59 (protectin) is a membrane protein located in the trans-Golgi network, recycling endosome and cell membrane and is secreted in response to stress. We used elegant immunoprecipitation and proteomics-based proteomics approaches to search for CD59 interactors in the trans-Golgi network. We focused on the identification of non-enzymatic binding partners in membrane and membrane-proximal proteins to better understand the cell biology of
