To investigate the role of signal transducer and activator of transcription (STAT)-3 in human esophageal squamous cell carcinoma (ESCC). A total of 40 paraffin-embedded, archival specimens of ESCC obtained at initial surgical treatment and 17 normal esophageal specimens were used for this study. This study also analyzed the expression and phosphorylation of STAT-3 in ESCC and correlated its levels with clinicopathological factors. The overall STAT-3 expression in ESCC was lower than that in the normal esophageal specimens (P 09e8f5149f

Get information out of your apps, extract any data from the host, then redirect them back in. I wouldn't do this with per-app settings, because Android applications are un-monetizable if all Android users don't get what you want passed it's not default user communication A single set of shared settings seems best. However, you'll end up with Plenty of apps/consumers/microcosm that ignore your settings using for things that aren't your settings As others have said, it's a no-brainer to use a shared settings framework Content rating: 2 Downloads last week: 41 Sales rank: 932 Android Market Comments A Google UserMar 31, 2013 Why? A Google UserMar 28, 2013 Not usable Because I don't want a floating menu bar that takes up 30 of my screen space and doesn't show me any notifications. This is not useful.
