Is there a command which would return a list of all running scripts (i.e. not just python scripts)? Bonus points: The run time of each script needs to be returned. The output from each script needs to be consumed in a similar manner to the output from the scriptname argument to sh -x. A: You can use the run-parts command: run-parts --list /etc/ Example: $ echo 'echo Hello World' > script1.sh $ echo 3e33713323
