How to recover files or folders Hard disk jitter (jitter) is the episodic appearance of translucent rectangular areas or black bars on the monitor screen, while horizontal stripes appear on the image of the hard drive (HDD), which can be recognized by the overlap of adjacent areas. Under load, this phenomenon disappears. A jittery drive is very annoying to users and this phenomenon is transmitted to all objects in the system, including programs, files and data tables. In Windows XP, it is written that the Unlock service will start and require the restoration of files from file storage. However, more often than not, the disc is burned normally, and if you accidentally delete something important, the system will do everything automatically.

Method 1. - Cleaning the system registry after installing Windows. First you need to leave Windows alone for 10 minutes and check the box "Clean system
