Determining what kind of image you're looking to make Once you know the kind of image you want to create and the environment you want to bring to life, you can then focus on the more specific elements of that image. Start by considering what this image will be used for. When is it going to be used? What are you going to say? How are you going to say it? Are you going to include text, or is it just a photograph? Are you going to produce this image for the web or as a print file? Will you create this image for a desktop background or as a living space in your home or office?
