as a traditional instrumental as well as a vocal music, in north indian classical music, there are two types of tanuras -- the tabla and the tanpura. these instruments are played in a rhythmic and harmonic manner to accompany vocal or instrumental music. the tabla is an indian wooden percussion instrument that is played by striking it with the hand or fingers. the sounds produced from the tabla, which consists of a hard metal frame and a soundboard (the resonating chamber), are made by striking the wooden frame with the palms of the hand. the fundamental rhythmic, harmonic and melodic components of indian classical music are comprised of the four instruments of the tabla. the tanpura or tanpura is a string instrument used to play melodious songs in the indian classical music. it is played with the right hand and the left hand plays the tanpura, while the tanpuras deep, rich, and mellow tone is quite different from the tabla. for more details see software description: riyazstudio comes with a built-in metronome, tonal and rhythmic enhancer. the tanpura effects filter, the tabla effects filter and the tanpuras polyphonic filter are also included. the soundstorm tuning tool has been modified to be more precise and accurate. a harmolically tuned sound engine called the harmomatic (tm) was developed and added to the software. riyazstudio practice software is especially recommended to be used in combination with the tabla performance software tanpura s2 and the tabla tablestyle software rayaz and the tanpura tablestyle software rayaz. full details of the combination can be found here: riyazstudio 1.20 is available at the following sites:
